

THE TRI-WEEKLY YEOMAN.

THE SACRIFICE

"There, Mary—now don't you think I deserve to be called a pretty good husband?" laughed the young man as he dropped down in the lady's palm half a dozen gold pieces.

"Yes, you are, Edward, the very best husband in the world," and she lifted up her sweet face, beaming with smiles as a June morning with sunshine.

"Thank you, thank you, for the very flattering words. And now, dear, I want you to have the clock by next Christmas. I am anxious to see how you will look in it."

"But, Edward," gazing steadily into the shining pieces in her rosy palm, "you know we are not rich people, and it really seems a piece of extravagance for me to give thirty dollars for a velvet clock."

"No, it is not, either. You deserve the clock, Mary, and I've set my mind upon having it. Then it'll last you so many years, that it will be more economical in the end than a less expensive article."

It was evident that the lady was predisposed to conviction. She made no further attempt to refute her husband's arguments, and her small fingers closed over the gold pieces, as she rose up, saying:

"Well, dear, the supper has been waiting half an hour, and I know you must be hungry."

Edward and Mary Clark were the husband and wife of a year. He was a book-keeper in a large establishment, with a salary of fifteen hundred dollars. His fair young wife made a little earthly paradise of the cottage home in the suburbs of the city, for within its walls dwelt two lives that were set like music to poetry, keeping time to each other. And dwelt, also, the peace which God giveth those who love Him.

Mrs. Clark came into the room suddenly, and the girl lifted her head, and then turned it away quickly, but not till the first glance told the lady that the fair face was swollen and stained with tears.

Janet Hill was a young seamstress whom Mrs. Clark had occasionally employed for the last six months. She was always attracted by her young, bright face, her modest yet dignified manner, and the lady saw at once that some great sorrow had smitten the girl.

Obedient to the promptings of a warm, impulsive heart, she went to her and laid her hand on her arm, saying softly:

"Won't you tell me what is troubling you, Janet?"

"Nothing that anybody can help," answered the girl, trying still to avert her face, while the tears swelled in her eyes from the effort she made to speak.

"But perhaps I can. At any rate, you know, it does us good sometimes to confide our sorrows to a friend, and I need not assure you that I sincerely grieve because of your distress."

And so, with kind words and half-caressing movements of the little hand, laid on the seamstress' arm, Mrs. Clark drew from her lips her sad story.

She was an orphan, maintaining herself by her daily labors, and she had one brother, just sixteen, three years her junior. He had been for some time a kind of under clerk in a large wholesale establishment, where there was every prospect of promotion, but he had seriously injured himself in the summer by lifting some heavy boxes of goods, and at last a dangerous fever set in, which had finally left him so exhausted a state that the doctor had no hope of his recovery.

"And to think that I shall never see him again, Mrs. Clark," cried the poor girl, with a fresh burst of tears. "To think he must die, away there among strangers in the hospital, with no loving face there to bend over him in his last hours, or brush away the damp curls from the forehead which Mamma used to be so proud of. Oh, George—my darling, my bright-faced little brother, George," and here the poor girl broke down in a storm of sobs and tears.

"Poor child, poor child!" murmured Mrs. Clark, her sweet eyes swimming with tears. "How much would it take to see you to your brother, and return?" she asked at last.

"About thirty dollars. I have not so much money in the world. You see it is nearly four hundred miles off; but I could manage to support myself after I got there."

A thought passed quickly through Mrs. Clark's mind. She stood still a few moments, her blue eyes fixed in deep meditation. At last she said kindly:

"Well, my child, try to bear up bravely, and we will see what can be done for you," and the warm, cheerful tones comforted the sad heart of the seamstress.

The lady went up stairs and took the pieces out of her ivory port monnaie. There was a brief struggle in her mind. "Somehow I've set my heart on this velvet clock," she thought, "and Edward will be disappointed. It is going out to select the velvet this very afternoon. But then, there's that dying boy, lying there with strange fancies about him, and longing, as the slow hours go by, for the sight of the sister who loves him, and would not this thought haunt me every time I put on my new clock? After all, my old brocade cloth is not so bad, if it is only turned. And, I am sure, I can bring Edward over to my way of thinking. No you must go without the clock this time, and have the pleasure of knowing you've smoothed the path going down to the valley of the shadow of death, Mary Clark." And she closed the port monnaie resolutely, and went down stairs.

"Janet, put up your work this moment—there is no time to be lost. Here is the money; take it to your brother."

The girl lifted her eyes a moment, almost in bewilderment, to the lady, and then as she comprehended the truth, a cry of joy broke from her lips, that its memory never faded from the heart through all the after years of Mrs. Clark's life.

"George! George!" The words leaped from her lips, as the sister sprang forward to the low bed where the youth lay, his white sharpened face gleaming deathlike from amidst his thick yellow curls.

He opened his large eyes suddenly—a flush passed over his pallid face. He stretched out his thin arms, exclaiming, "O, Janet! Janet! I have prayed God for the sight of you once more before I died!"

"His pulse is stronger than it has been for two weeks, and his face has a better hue," said the doctor, a few hours later, as he made his morning visit through the wards of the hospital.

"His sister came yesterday and watched with him," answered an attendant, glancing at the young girl who hung breathless over the sleeping invalid.

"Ah, that explains it. I'm not certain but that young man has recuperative power enough left to recover, if he could have the care and tenderness, for the next two months, which love alone can furnish."

How Janet's heart leaped at the very words. That very morning she had an interview with her brother's employers. They had been careless, but not intentionally unkind, and the story enlisted their sympathies.

In a day or two, George was removed to a quiet, comfortable private home, and his sister installed herself by his couch, his nurse and comforter.

Three years have passed. The shadows of the night were dropping already around. Mrs. Clark sat in her chamber humming a nursery tune, to which the gentle kept sort of rhythmic movement. Sometimes she would pause suddenly and adjust the snowy blankets around the cheeks of the little slumberer, shining out from the bright curls as red apples shine amid fading leaves in October orchards. Suddenly the door opened. "Sh—sh," said the young mother, and she lifted her finger with a smiling warning as her husband entered.

"There's something for you, Mary. It came by express this afternoon," he said the words in an under tone, placing a small package in her lap.

The lady removed the covers with eyes filled with wonder, while her husband leaned over her shoulder and watched her movements.

A white box disclosed itself, and removing the cover, Mrs. Clark described a small, elegantly-clad hunting watch. She lifted it with a cry of delightful surprise, and touching the spring the case flew back, and on the inside was inscribed these words:

"To Mrs. Mary Clark. In token of the life she saved."

"O, Edward, it must have come from George and Janet Hill," exclaimed the lady, and the quick tears leaped into her eyes. "You know she's been with him ever since that time, and she wrote me, last summer, that he had obtained an excellent situation as head clerk in the firm. What an excellent gift, and how I shall value it. Not simply for itself, either."

"Well, Mary, you were in the right, then, though I'm sorry to say I was half-foxed with you for giving up your velvet clock, and you have not had one yet."

"No, I have not had one, but I never regretted it."

She said the words with her eyes fastened upon him.

"Nor I, Mary, for I cannot doubt that your sacrifice bought the young man's life."

"Oh, say those words again, Edward. Blessed be God for them," added the lady fervently.

The husband drew his arm around his wife and murmured reverently:

"Blessed be God, Mary, who put it into your heart to do this good deed."

THE TRAGEDY IN CALDWELL.—In relation to this horrible affair, already mentioned by us, the Hopkinsville Mercury says:

A terrible tragedy occurred in the Treadwater neighborhood, twelve miles north of Princeton, last Friday, Jesse Williams, a man over fifty years of age, was found hanging on a tree in the road near his house.

He and his family had been a terror to the neighborhood for years on account of their desperate character, and were suspected of having instigated the murder of Mrs. Stevens, a few months ago. They also figured in a horrible outburst of violence, in which they were very lately, an account of which we published.

The family had started to Princeton to witness the release of young Williams from the jail, and found the old man hanging by the neck on the way. The most terrible rumors are afloat throughout the community as to various murders perpetrated by this family, which have now been confirmed by the negroes. It is rumored that skeletons have been found in a cave near Williams' house.

The people are wild with excitement, and have raised a vigilance committee, who are resolved to exterminate the offenders. The young Williams have fled and are hotly pursued. The Williams are one of the wealthiest families in the county, and are believed to have used foul means to add to their treasures for many years.

Frauds! Frauds!

The Opposition are always beaten by frauds; and perhaps that is the reason they depend so much on frauds to beat other people. It is highly amusing to read the indignant charges of fraud made by the Opposition about here, as if they had a right to complain. Harlan was beaten by fraud. Car-bolans of Irishmen were voted for Simms. These were quite specific and very confident. The Louisville Journal always knows all about these things, and writes them down as if the editor were an eye-witness, and could testify to the whole matter. He was very explicit on the Irishmen who voted for Simms; and Harlan would contest; of course he would. In a few days it was announced that the proof was not easily obtained, and so difficult is it that the contest is about given up. Bets were offered that more fraudulent votes were polled for Harlan than for Simms; no one took the bets; and the natural conclusion is that the alleged frauds exist.

The Journal gives currency to a statement of a correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat of great frauds in Oregon, by which a Democrat was elected; and there is to be a cut in the contest, upon consideration the fraud will be hard to prove, and perhaps they will not be found at all; perhaps they don't exist. According to the Opposition, all mankind are corrupt. No wonder if they conclude it is not worth while for them to be honest, and act accordingly.—Lou. Dem.

VIGILANCE COMMITTEE IN LOUISIANA.—For some weeks past reports have reached us, says the Louisiana Bulletin, of an excitement in some of the southern parishes of the State, the formation of vigilance committees, etc. In the parishes of Vermilion and St. Martin the difficulties have culminated, and the Governor has issued a proclamation ordering the vigilance committee men to disband and yield obedience to the laws. A. Oliver, Esq., District Attorney, has issued an order to the people of the two parishes, calling upon them to rally to the support of the laws, reminding them of their duties as good citizens, and of the dangers of the usurpation of authority by a popular assembly or a body of citizens which belongs to the regularly constituted officers of the law. From the address of Mr. Oliver, we infer that this popular movement in Vermilion and St. Martin has the countenance of many respectable citizens. He says he respects their motives but feels called upon to condemn their acts. He requests them to pay respect to the laws of their country, and not to set an example of the lawlessness which they condemn.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, ESQ., OF KENTON.—It is truly a matter of sincere pleasure to us to see that this noble and most worthy young gentleman has been selected as one of the Representatives from the county of Kenton by a large majority. No truer, firmer, or more reliable man can be found in any portion of the commonwealth, and the large majority by which he has been elected is conclusive evidence that he is highly appreciated at home. We predict that he will make one of the most active and influential members of the House, and give general satisfaction to his constituents.

A more honorable and upright gentleman nowhere lives, and we congratulate the Democracy of old Kenton upon the judicious selection which they have made. Mr. Carlisle has a brilliant future; and if life and health be spared him, it will not be long ere he will be called to fill other more important offices of trust and emolument, either State or National. May success attend him.

PROBABLE MURDER.—The body of Ephraim White, of Lawrence county, was found in Big Sandy river, near Turman's Ferry, on Wednesday last, and on examination it was found that his front teeth were knocked out and that there were bruises and cuts about the head, which led to the conclusion that he had been murdered and thrown into the river. A man by the name of John Tomblin, with whom he was last seen, was arrested on suspicion of having committed the deed; but on examination before the magistrate, there being no proof of his guilt, he was released.

The Race-Horse Starke.

New York, Monday, Aug. 23.—Your sporting readers may perhaps be entertained by being told something of the life and adventures of Mr. Ten Brock's horse "Starke," who has recently bagged so much money for his owner in England.

He was bred in Louisiana by General Wells. His pedigree is unexceptionable, being by "Wagner," of the "Starke" family, "Prior," "Proctor," and "Lexington," by "Imp. Glencoe." His first appearance as a two year old was at New Orleans in 1885, where he was beaten for the Gaiety Club stakes, mile heats, by "La Variete." He next appeared at the Alexandria (La.) meeting, and was successful in two races, mile heats, beating "Viley" and "Jack Gamble." At Natchitoches he carried off two jockey-club purses, beating "Viley" again. At the Mobile races he beat the celebrated "Bill Chatham" in two heats, two miles. He next ran against and was beaten by "La Variete," at the Metairie Jockey Club winter meeting in January last, and was shortly afterward purchased by Mr. Ten Brock of General Wells, and sent to England with "Empire" early in the Spring. "Starke" is engaged, along with "Priores," in the Warwick Cup race, three miles, to be run on the 7th of September, at Warwick. Both are also entered for the great Yorkshire handicap, at Doncaster, on the 13th of the same month. It will be remembered that "Priores" carried off this latter stake last year, and her success in so doing lost her the Casarwath.

Democratic Convention.

TRUSTON, N. J., Aug. 21.—The Democratic State Convention met to-day, and was the largest and most stormy ever held here.

There were 2,000 persons present during the session.

Six ballots were taken, when E. R. V. Wright, of Hudson county, was nominated as candidate for Governor. The next highest competitor was Charles Skelton, of Mercer county.

The anti-Lecompton and Lecompton delegates from Sussex had a long and tedious fight regarding their right to seats in the Convention. Finally the difficulty was settled by the withdrawal of both parties.

Resolutions were adopted favoring the principle of popular sovereignty, opposing the opening of the slave trade, and the like.

The nomination of Mr. Wright was made unanimous.

There is great rejoicing among Mr. Wright's friends over his success in so spirited a contest.

CONTESTED ELECTION.—We understand it is really true, and no mistake, that B. J. Clay has given up the contest for the election of the latter to the State Senate. We have not seen his specifications, but understand they contain an unprecedented list of alleged frauds, mistakes, and illegalities, all of which, if true, would defeat Col. Prall by near two thousand majority. This is decidedly the richest job of the summer.

But, while Mr. Clay cannot be blamed for running as he did, solely upon his own merits, and high qualifications, without money or influential friends, and against a competitor of large landed estates, immense wealth, hosts of friends, and a pride which induced him to spend money with a lavish hand, we are not surprised he rebels against the verdict of a people who did not have the intelligence to discover his pre-eminent qualifications and superior merits. It was ruled in Col. Prall to avail himself of his hundreds of thousands against a competitor who notoriously refused to use any money in the canvass. If Mr. Clay was beaten by Prall's money, he ought to contest.

Bourbon Barbecue Postponed.

The grand barbecue meeting to be held at Haroldsburg on the 25th inst., makes it necessary to postpone the barbecue to be given by the Democratic party of Bourbon county, from Thursday, the 25th inst., as heretofore announced, to Thursday, the 1st of September thereafter. The barbecue will be held near the town of Paris.

The following distinguished speakers have been invited, and are expected to be present and address the multitude.

Hon. John C. Breckinridge, Gov. Beriah Magoffin, Hon. L. W. Powell, Hon. Linn Boyd, Gen. William O. Butler, Hon. J. B. Clay, Gov. A. P. Willard, Hon. J. W. Stevenson, Major James B. Beck, Hon. George E. Pugh, Colonel Thomas H. Stevenson, Colonel T. P. Porter, Col. Thomas H. Holt, Maj. Robert Richardson, Hon. John Young Brown, Hon. W. H. Burns, Wm. F. Chiles, Hon. C. A. Dixon, and others.

The ladies will be provided for in the very best style.

CENTRAL AMERICAN AFFAIRS.—NEW YORK.

AUGUST 21.—The new Minister to Central America, says the Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, sails from New York September 5th, and is expected to reach his destination in the new Spanish paper in this city, says the Nicaragua Minister has made arrangements with the Old Transit Route (Vanderbilt's) for the isthmus travel. It also pronounces filibuster Walker delinquent, says his star is set, and all his efforts cannot raise men or money to back his filibustering propensities. A decree under the sign manual of Her Majesty is issued in 28th, according to Mr. Horatio Q. Perry, late Secretary of the American Legation at Madrid, the right to connect Spain and Cuba with a line of telegraph. The first article requires the cable to be laid from Cadiz via the Canaries the Cape Verde Islands, Cape San Roque, the coast of Brazil, Guyana, and Trinidad, to Porto Rico. By the eighth article, the public service is to have the precedence over private correspondence.

American State Council.

GENEVA, N. Y., August 21.—The American State Council met. At the afternoon session the committee on credentials, composed of Messrs. J. B. Murray and Chas. B. Freeman, reported the names of one hundred and forty delegates as having presented regular credentials.

Second Dispatch.—In the State American Council meeting, held at Geneva, the time and place of holding the State Convention was discussed with great animation, but a majority were found to be in favor of holding it on a different day from that of the Republicans, and it was finally decided that it should be held at Utica, on the 25th of September. Two delegates to the National Convention were subsequently elected, the Hon. B. F. Briggs, of New York, and Mr. Brooks, of New York. Mr. Brooks addressed the Convention at considerable length, and was followed by the Hon. Daniel Ullman. After which the Convention adjourned sine die.

BRAVEY OF A YOUNG LADY.—Yesterday afternoon, Miss Mary P. Patterson, 253 Monroe street, surprised a burglar in her apartment, who was busily engaged in packing up some silk dresses and other wearing apparel, valued at $60. She inquired of the man what he was doing there, when he started to run away. The young woman prevented him, however, and shutting the front door, kept him prisoner. The burglar made several attempts to knock Miss Patterson down, but she dodged all his blows, and determinedly kept the door for several minutes. He finally succeeded in pushing her aside, and escaped to the street. The brave girl followed, and called, "Watch, watch!" Officer Moran, of the Seventh Precinct, responded, and after a short race captured the fellow.—N. Y. Times.

Washington Items.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The Administration has received assurances from the Government of Costa Rica of its preparation to appoint, in conjunction with that of the United States, a commissioner to settle the claims of our citizens against that republic. It is presumed that this commissioner will be appointed shortly after the arrival of Minister Dinty at San Jose.

Capt. May, of the 5th Infantry, has been appointed by the President as Paymaster in the army, in place of Brevet Lieut. Col. Collier, resigned.

The President to-day extended the hospitalities of the White House to Senators Mada and Lerdo.

ISSUES.—An emigrant, who gives his name as Wm. Williams, and says that he came from Frankfort, Ky., was taken up by the police on Sunday last in a state of insanity, and has been raving most of the time since. He arrived here a few days ago with a company from Pike's Peak.

A Headquarters for Fashionable Trade.

The passer-by on Fourth street, whether stranger or resident, cannot have failed observing the continual throng towards the magnificent store of Messrs. Durkee, Heath & Co., between Market and Jefferson. The popularity of this fine establishment has long been guaranteed, and, we have no doubt, justly attributable to the admirable manners and great courteousness of the managing partner, Mr. H. Heath.

But aside from his agreeableness, the reputation of the house is based upon the most solid foundation possible. It is known to be the very place where the most elegant and varied assortment of goods is obtainable, as well as the very cheapest, this or any other market affords.

The extensive building, four stories in height and one hundred and forty feet deep, is filled with every description of dry goods, from the commonest six-penny cotton to the most choice and costly silks. There is nothing a lady can desire or fancy, but what is there sold. Each story is devoted to particular branches of the trade, and the arrangements for the accommodation of all classes of purchasers are as fine as we have ever seen. More than a score of public and active clerks are always in readiness to supply the wants of customers, and we venture to say that no one ever enters the house without a determination to return, the bargains are so advantageous and the stock so excellent.

We should have to publish a catalogue longer than that of Homer's ships, did we attempt to enumerate the articles offered for sale. Suffice it to say, that no lady can call for any article but what her wants are immediately satisfied. Dress goods, ribbons, linens, gloves, parasols, and all the paraphernalia of female wardrobes, abound.

Besides, there is the carpet-room, where can be found carpets ranging from 50 cents per yard to the most expensive velvet and a variety of goods could desire. In addition, is a matting, window curtains, &c. An accomplished upholsterer is constantly employed to prepare for use all these articles.

Messrs. Durkee, Heath & Co. have succeeded, by the exercise of great energy, liberality, and liberal advertising, in establishing a heavy trade. Their services, rendered in New York for the purpose of seeking the most advantageous purchases, and ships weekly large invoices of the most carefully selected and cheaply purchased goods to this market. Thus unusually fine bargains are offered the public.

This firm is now daily in receipt of fall supplies, and will be for months to come. They intend to introduce many new and elegant styles, and have no doubt, of course, that the ladies will flock to Durkee, Heath & Co.'s in greater numbers than heretofore.

SEVERAL OF A YOUNG MAN.—A young German, named Theodore Reider, arrived in this city a few days ago, and was at the Frankfort Hotel. He told his situation to Mr. Bucher, the governor, and opened a landlaid, that he was out of means and wished employment, and that gentleman exerted himself in his behalf and succeeded in getting him a place in a flower garden, where the work would be such as he had been accustomed to.

He was to commence work in a day or two. Mr. Bucher remarked that he was quiet and reserved—rather melancholy—never drinking or joining in any gay or lively conversation. Yesterday morning he did not take a regular breakfast, but one of the boys prevailed upon him to take a cup of coffee and a slice of bread. After this slight repast he smoked a cigar, and was observed to take a glass of water. This was the last that was seen of him alive.

Some time after 9 o'clock his corpse was discovered in one of the rooms in the third story, stretched on the floor, and the spirit seemed to have passed from its earthly tabernacle without a struggle. An inquest was held on the body by Justice Coulton. The following letter, written in German in a beautiful hand-writing, was translated and read to the jury:

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 24, 1890

DEAR SIR—MR. BUCHER: Your excellency will excuse me if I should ask a last favor of you, but circumstances have compelled my doing it. My last hour is calm. My luggage expenses and what I owe for my boarding, make out in two bills, and send to Messrs. H. and L. Co., 178 Fulton st., New York. My last laborer is my cousin—his maiden name was Schmidt—and they will pay you, as they are near relations. Ask Mrs. Haberlad to forgive me, and thank him for all his kindness to me. Write to Germany and tell me that they are all well, and that I am dead. I have left a letter to my dear wife, in which I tell her that I am dead, and that I am leaving her in the hands of God. I have left a letter to my dear wife, in which I tell her that I am dead, and that I am leaving her in the hands of God. I have left a letter to my dear wife, in which I tell her that I am dead, and that I am leaving her in the hands of God.

Yours, THEODORE REIDER.

His papers were found arranged in his coat sack, as indicated in his letter, and everything went to show that it was a calm, deliberate suicide. There was a small paper with a powder resembling morphine in his pocket, but the supposition is that some more active agent was used. He was recently buried, a large number of his countrymen attending the funeral.

GETTING TO HEAVEN BY WAY OF NEW ORLEANS.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Dispatch gives the following:

"We have a Methodist preacher here who is a jolly wag. A few days since, a young man who had long been attached to his church, and who was about to leave for New Orleans, came to bid his pastor farewell."

"And so you are going to that degenerate place, New Orleans, are you?"

"Yes, sir, but I don't expect to be influenced by an extraneous pressure of any kind," responded the young man, with considerable earnestness.

"Well, I am glad to see you so confident. I hope the Lord will guide you. But do you know the temptations which exist there?"

"No; not particularly."

"Well, I do; you'll find wanton women in the guise of Paris, tempting the very elect; and rare wines and ardent drinks; and you'll find gay company, and night brawling, and gambling, and dissipation, and running after the lusts of the old man Adam."

"Still, sir, I hope to combat these successfully."

"I hope you will, my dear Christian brother," was the reply. "I hope you will. And let me give you this much for your consolation in case you should fall from grace. The tempter is worse than the sin, and the greater the temptation, the more merit there is in resisting it. The man who resists temptation is a hero. The man who yields to it is a slave. Heaven by way of New Orleans, is sure to have twice as high a place in eternal glory as he who reaches Paradise through the quiet portals of Connecticut or Pennsylvania."

"Bailey's Free South."

The Abolitionists in Bangor, Me., are still of the opinion, as we learn from the Times of that place, that Wm. S. Bailey did not humbug them when he raised donations for an Abolition paper which he pretended to publish in New York, Ky., called the Free South, which paper, he said, had great influence at home, and had revolutionized public opinion that all the officers in New York and New Jersey were anti-slavery men. At the late election the Republican ticket got just twelve votes in New York and Campbell county out of two thousand two hundred votes taken! How will the Abolitionists of Bangor reconcile this fact with the great influence of Bailey's paper, as testified to by him! The truth is, his paper, as published at it in New York, is scarcely ever seen in that city.—Cin. Eng.

"We notice in the Louisville Daily Democrat of Thursday a very complimentary call upon our humble self to become a candidate for Governor of Kentucky, by the House of Representatives of Kentucky. We thank the House for this kind notice, and will simply add, that while we are not disposed to announce ourselves as a candidate, if our services should be desired, we will try and make it convenient to serve the Democracy in any honorable capacity.—*Leb. The Democratic State Convention to-day nominated Harrison C. Hoar, of Calumet county, for Governor; A. S. Palmer, Lieut. Governor. It is doubtful whether delegates to the Charleston Convention will be elected at the present Convention.
